ANTIQUE-INSPIRED LIGHTING

The wall-mounted reading lights add vintage charm to the bedroom while making the space even more welcoming.

HEADBOARD

The vibrantly upholstered headboard anchors the color palette as well as the furniture grouping.

NIGHTSTAND

The diminutive buttercream nightstand bridges the palette, while the simplicity of its design provides a restful focal point for the eye.

HOOKED WOOL RUG

Acquired on an overseas adventure, the hooked rug tames a riot of color with the orderliness of its grid. Perhaps most important on a cold winter night, it's heaven underfoot.

BED THROWS

Retail bed throws from Anthropologie pop with color yet soothe with a grandmother's softness. They also seem to be in conversation with the rug, each one-upping the other.

DESIGN CHRONICLES

By Sandy LaMendola, ASID

The mission of an interior designer is to create environments that facilitate, celebrate and enrich our clients' life journeys. To do that, we embark on a voyage of our own - one of discovery, understanding and creation. Design Chronicles invites you along for the ride.

Living History

Some clients seek to recreate the past. This client allowed Twist to put a joyful spin on it. For the guest bedroom in their lakeside residence, the homeowners envisioned an environment that captured the coziness of childhood sleepovers at their grandparents' house while expressing a modern pop sensibility through color, pattern and texture. Their goal was not only to make guests feel comfortable, but to energize and engage them.

From the vintage lace crochet that belonged to one of the clients' grandmothers, to a beloved hooked rug acquired abroad, every detail invites guests into the family's history while making them a cherished part of the present. The clients could imagine no better way to welcome others into their home.

The character of this room reflects the power of a collaboration that traversed past and present and embraced both the clients' individualism and the bounty of family and friends' talents and gifts. The result is an environment whose unique features and nuance exude authenticity and beckon with their warmth.

Anyone up for a sleepover?

GRANDMA'S LACE

A cherished gift from generations past, Grandma's lace was paired with solid-color cottons and sewn into accent pillows that, for all their subtlety, are the first thing visitors notice.
